Investment objective

To build capital in real (inflation-adjusted) terms over the medium to longer term. Investors should expect a high correlation to stockmarket behaviour and rewards, and be entirely comfortable with substantial volatility and very limited protection in times of market weakness.

Risk profile

The strategy is managed in accordance with Dynamic Planner risk profile 7, with the strategy's expected volatility targeted to stay within the assigned Dynamic Planner risk profile's boundaries.

About the Hybrid Passive Risk Targeted Managed Service

Our Hybrid Passive Risk Targeted ('RT') Managed Service consists of five actively managed investment strategies (Hybrid Passive RT 3-7) that provide lower cost access to our discretionary fund management capabilities through the combination of active and passive collective investments. Each strategy has a different level of risk and expected return, and are rigorously mapped within the volatility boundaries assigned to specific Dynamic Planner risk profiles (RTM 3-7). The service provides a solution that, when cost considerations are paramount, does not compromise on quality.

Investment update

After a strong first quarter of the year, April was a difficult month for investors. The main catalyst for this reversal was a stronger-than-expected inflation number in the US, which, in conjunction with some continuing resilience in the economy, modified the markets' expectations around the timing and extent of potential interest rate cuts. There was an unusually wide dispersion of returns across markets and sectors over the month. Despite some encouraging economic data and a decent first quarter earnings season, the S&P 500 Index was the laggard, falling over 4% during the month. European markets fell 1.5% with the negative impact of 'higher for longer' rate expectations partially offset by some firmer evidence of an improving economic backdrop. The UK market proved to be the strongest developed market in April, rising over 2%. The main driver was the rise in commodity prices as tensions between Israel and Iran rose, which boosted returns given the UK market's heavy weighting in the resources sector. Given the more recent data, markets are now pricing in two rate cuts in the US this year and a similar number in the eurozone and the UK. There is still considerable uncertainty on the timing of a reversal in rate policy. Markets will continue to speculate on the timing of a reversal in interest rate policy and this may cause some volatility in asset prices. We believe that the fundamental backdrop remains supportive for risk assets with positive levels of global economic growth looking ahead, receding inflationary pressures and the prospect of looser monetary policy moving into 2025. As such, no changes were made over the month as the strategy remains at the upper end of its Dynamic Planner risk profile. We see an attractive combination of earnings growth recovery and reasonable valuations across key equity markets, including areas such as Europe and Japan, which now look more compelling on a global scale. Volatility in fixed income markets is currently quite extreme however the thesis for our exposure to both sovereign bonds and corporate credit is very much intact given our views on the economy and the outlook for interest rates.
